Heischober Read The Future

By Greg Goldfarb,
Sun editor

The Virginia Beach City Council is comprised of 11 free spirits and free thinkers who get along together," boasts Beach Vice Mayor Harold Heischober. "Consequently," Heischober continued, "the Virginia Beach community is getting its money's worth from this group of local leaders. We all have the best interests of the city at heart!"

Heischober, owner of Hilltop Toyota, began his council term last summer when he was elected to one of two vacant at-large seats. Meyera Oberdorf took the other spot. But even as Heischober eyes a futuristic seat in the Virginia House of Delegates, he remains in tune with the problems and needs of Virginia Beach.

"Our greatest problem right now is with water," Heischober said, "without it, many, many sectors of the community are adversely affected."

"For example, without adequate water the Beach tourist industry could diminish right before our eyes. Without water, we would have a hard time maintaining the city's industrial tax base; residential growth would cease without water, as would general business growth; lack of water would impact our local military activities; and we already know what drought has done to the Beach agribusiness community."

Steady, controlled residential and business growth is paramount for Virginia Beach's successful future.

"Most council members agree that we must be certain not to let the growth of this city exceed its public services," Heischober stressed.

"Virginia Beach is a conservative, suburban bedroom community, and very attractive to incoming Tidewater residents," he continued. "It's my mood, and of council, to maintain very, very slow, sound growth."

"In addition to providing services to stay in step with growth, we must make use that our local industry is kept ecologically clean. Our concern is to constrain growth and keep it orderly."

born in New York City and is a graduate of Utrecht High School where his athletic career began to bloom.

Heischober worked for a time during high school, in a hotel performing such tasks as dipping butter balls and running er-professionally scouted during high school, and upon graduation, the Brooklyn Dodgers signed him.

"It was only the farm system," he said, "but I signed to play for Brooklyn in March 1938."

At the same time, Hei-as an anti-aircraft officer. He also managed the Fort Monore baseball team.

"I was lucky," Heischober said modestly, "in that because of my background, my mental and physical abilities, I could work and play for the same team."

"I elected to leave that job with his blessing," Heischober said, "and I went out to seek my own fortune in 1962; and here I am."

Heischober bought a Portsmouth American Motors Franchise in 1962, but sold it to open his Toyota dealership.

"It was obvious to me in the 1960's that small economy cars were on the horizon for the future," Heischober said. "We broke ground at Hilltop Toyota in 1966 and began operation in early 1967. I began with 17 employees and now have 70."

Heischober is former president of both the state and local Automobile Associations, which may be viewed as his first active interest in politics.

"I had kindled a taste for politics while working for Duckworth," Heischober said. "I became more involved with the automobile association as I began to see more of a need for legislation which would affect my business."

Heischober lost his first council bid in 1970 to Clarence Holland. "He beat me good," Heischober remembers with a smile.

But he maintained his interest.

"Don Merrick and Reid Ervin, talked to me about running for a council seat again, and I liked the idea," Heischober said.

"I decided to run again because I felt that I had fulfilled most of my other professional and personal ambitions. I haven't made my mind up about 1984 yet."

After almost a year in Ervin, talked to me about running for a council seat again, and I liked the idea," Heischober said.

"Serving on city council is very, very enjoyable and very interesting," Heischober said.

"It's a pleasure serving with 10 other educated people who are genuinely concerned about the City of Virginia Beach. Sometimes we don't always agree, but that's Democracy in action."

The Heischobers' have three children: Larry, 35; Steven, 33; and Jim, 26.

Harold Heischober, 61, was raised in New York

Keeping things orderly should be easy for Heischober.

He is not only a well respected Beach councilman, which requires a busy businessman like himself to expend his time very carefully, but he is a college graduate, a military officer, and a former professional athlete.

Heischober, married with three children, is the son of a New York City Detective, who retired with 20 years on the New York Police Force.

"I grew up in what they call 'Hell's Kitchen,'" Heischober recalls about the days when his father, Barney, worked his beat. "That same West Side of Broadway is the end of town that Jackie Gleason and James Cagney came from."

Heischober, 61, was raised.

"Some of those tubs were heavy," Heischober remarked about the tubs which he remembers weighing 60 pounds each. "I only worked in the hotel for about a year," he said, "and earned about 15 cents an hour. I worked two hours a day."

He spent the rest of his time studying and playing either baseball or football or running track.

In baseball, Heischober played shortstop for three years; in track he sprinted; and in football he was a halfback.

Why no basketball? "No career opportunity in it for me," he quipped. "I'm too small. Track was my first love; I started back when I was in junior high school."

Baseball was Heischober's sport. He had been chamber entered Saint John University's School of Commerce under a track and baseball scholarship. Was that kosher?

"I don't think we were really supposed to have conducted business that way," Heischober whispered, "but back then I don't think anybody really noticed."

He didn't get paid for the college ball he played, directly, and the other was Summer employment.

Heischober received his Bachelor of Business Administration and there after enlisted in the Army hoping to "get in and get out" before war erupted. Well, he didn't and it did.

"Military service was great," Heischober said. "I was young and ready."

Heischober was first assigned to Fort Monroe

He was stationed next at the Little Creek Mine Command. This post was in charge of placing mines in the Chesapeake Bay. Finally, he served at Fort Story, and left military service in March, 1946.

While in the Army he married Alice Jones in December, 1944.

Heischober turned down any Army commission to reenlist and went to work for a Norfolk credit corporation.

"It was an outgrowth of Ford," Heischober said. "I learned a lot there and stayed at that job for seven years."

He worked next for Cavalier Motor Company, a Norfolk Ford dealership owned by former Norfolk mayor F. W. Duckworth. During the 10 years he worked there Heischober moved to Princess Anne County.

Restore Discipline, Curb Vandalism

Coleman Makes School Proposals

In the tenth in a series of campaign position papers, Attorney General Marshall Coleman, a Republican candidate for Governor, today proposed a multi-point program to restore school discipline and curb student vandalism which last year cost the state school system hundreds of thousands of dollars.

"Discipline in the classroom is one of the critical issues facing public education in Virginia," said Coleman speaking at a news conference here. "The ultimate responsibility for orderly behavior rests with pupils and parents, but we need decisive action by elected and appointed officials to ensure parental accountability and implementation of other measures to reduce disorderly and destructive conduct by students.

Citing statistical data showing rising vandalism and disorder in the classroom, Coleman said that as Governor he would seek to raise public awareness of the costs of misbehavior, vandalism and violence, increase the involvement of parents in the school system and allow more teacher authority.

The Attorney General said he would offer legislation to give teachers authority to remove a disruptive student from the classroom, allow for systematic suspension and make assault of a teacher by a pupil a Class 6 felony instead of a Class 1 misdemeanor.

"Destructive and disorderly behavior would meet with swift and certain punishment," Coleman said.

Coleman said other goals would be reached by a Department of Education informational program and parental involvement. School systems would be required to notify parents in the event of student vandalism or disruptiveness and parents would face increased liability for recurring vandalism caused by their offspring. "More active involvement of parents in our school systems is a key component of a more disciplined school atmosphere," noted Coleman.

Crab Catching Baskets May Be Light This Year

Landings of hard blue crabs in Virginia and Maryland will continue to be below par through August of this year, Beach residents have learned from crab biologist Willard A. Van Engel of the Virginia Institute of Marine Science (College of William and Mary).

"We expect the combined Chesapeake Bay catch through August to be one-half to two-thirds the long-term average," he said.

Cooler than normal water temperatures in April and May have slowed the rates of feeding, growth and movement of crabs, resulting in below-normal catches by potters. Also, adult crab stocks are off because the basic supply, hatched in 1979, is below average in volume.

"Only a few crabs three to four inches wide are present in the bay now, and these will reach market size in two or three sheddings, by middle or late June," he said.

Van Engel first observed signs of diminished crab stocks in the fall of 1979, and a warning forecast was issued early in 1980. He predicted that the September 1980 through-August 1981 catch of crabs in the bay might fall as low as 40 million pounds. The annual bay-wide crab harvest normally averages 67 million pounds.

The biological year for the blue crab catch extends from September through August of the next year. Young crabs spawned during the summer months provide a year-class that begins to mature in September the following year. These adult stocks are then available to crab potters for 12 consecutive months.

A large number of the 1979 year-class (those presently available to the fishery) succumbed to the record rainfall of September 1979. Many of the survivors were subsequently displaced from Chesapeake Bay by high river and bay water discharge. Small numbers returned from the near-shore waters of the Continental Shelf in late June 1980, according to the scientist.

"There are signs that the catch may improve when a new year-class matures beginning in September, but will not be certain until our survey data is completed in mid-June," Van Engel added.

Parkway Improved

Plans for improving and enlarging the Lynnhaven Parkway interchange at the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway (VA Route 44) in Virginia Beach will be discussed at a public hearing at 7 p.m. June 10 in Plaza Junior High School at 3080 South Lynnhaven Road.

Interested citizens will have an opportunity to review the proposals at an informal meeting with representatives of the state Department of Highways and Transportation from 4:30 p.m. until 7:30 p.m. at the school on June 9, the day before the hearing. Maps, drawings, and other materials will be available at the meeting.

The information is also available for review at the Department of Highways and Transportation residency office at the intersection of US-Business Route 13 (Military Highway) and VA Route 168 in Chesapeake and at the district office at 1700 North Main Street in Suffolk.

The city of Virginia Beach requested that the department study the interchange and traffic problems resulting from the rapid development of the area. The interchange is not adequate to handle the current traffic demands safely, and proposals will be presented at the hearing to upgrade the interchange and improve its capacity to better serve present and future traffic needs.

The existing interchange is a modified "diamond" type. The proposed project would change this to a partial "cloverleaf" interchange with loops being added in all quadrants except the southwest. The entire interchange would be enlarged with the new ramps being located entirely outside the existing interchange. Also, the new loops would be located partially outside the existing ramps.

The Commission on the Conservation and Development of Public Beaches awarded $535,100 in matching grants at its recent Many meeting.

The localities receiving grants were: Town and Cape Charles, $70,100; Town of Colonial Beach, $155,000; City of Norfolk, $130,000; and the City of Virginia Beach, $160,000.

These grants were awarded on the merits of proposals which detailed beach enhancement and erosion control projects within each locality. Projects included construction of offshore breakwaters, groin fields, and beach nourishment.

The Commission's goal is to aid localities in enhancing their public beaches and thereby increase their recreational use and revenues. The Commission provides a mechanism by which all eligible localities' proposals are equally judged. Each granted request must be matched equally by locality funds and no locality may receive more than 30% of the funds allocated by the General Assembly in one fiscal year.

The Town of Colonial Beach will use its funds for the construction of seven offshore gapped breakwaters, a series of groins and beach nourishment behind the breakwaters. Upon completion of this project, the Town of Colonial Beach should reestablish itself as a prime recreational beach area on the Potomac. The Town should realize over $2,000,000 in benefits over the life of the project.

Vegetables Suit Beach Tastes

Growing vegetables at home allows Virginia Beach gardeners to suit their own tastes.

"Persons accustomed to the taste of vegetables purchased at a grocery may find the taste of freshly picked products different," said a Virginia Tech Extension specialist in home horticulture.

"The home gardeners not only can get a different taste, but can sample the home grown products at various stages of maturity and get the flavor they like best."

Keep notes on what the vegetables look like; then match the preferred taste with the appearance of the products for the next harvest, said Diane Relf, faculty member in Tech's College of Agriculture and Life Sciences.

She listed some characteristics of six vegetables. They are:

Asparagus - In newly planted asparagus, do not cut the spears until the third year, and then harvest for only five or six weeks or until the spears become less than half an inch in diameter. In following years the harvest season can be extended. Cut spears just under the soil surface. Harvest when they are six to eight inches tall, before the tips begin to separate. Snapping spears off rather than cutting them avoids injuring other young stems and eliminates some kitchen work. Any spears above ground after a killing frost are worthless.

Green or wax snap beans - Harvest when pods are full size. For beans that are very small, harvesting can be delayed until they are full size as long as the pods are still tender. They should break easily with a "snap" when ready for harvesting. Seeds should not cause the pods to bulge.

Broccoli - Harvest anytime after a firm head develops. If some plants can't be harvested after they reach full maturity, bend them to the ground on one side to break part of the roots to reduce the possibility of head splitting. If the heads have not split, they can be stored for long periods at temperatures of 32 to 45 degrees Fahrenheit.

Carrots - Harvest whenever the roots reach an acceptable size. Dig only the quantity needed for immediate use and allow the remainder to continue to increase in size. They may be left in the ground in the winter and dug as needed.

Sweet corn - Harvest while the husk is still dark green. Kernels should be full size when mature yellow or white color to the tip of the ear, but still in the soft, milk stage of growth. It is the sweetest just as the silk blackens. Corn matures very rapidly in hot weather. After picking, it should be refrigerated immediately to prevent the sugar from turning to starch. Sweet corn should be ready for harvest about three weeks after the first silk appears. Pierce a kernel with the thumbnail: milky juice means corn is just right; clear juice means wait a day or two; pasty fluid means you have missed the chances for perfection on that ear.

Miss Virginia Beach

She Plans To Be A Performer

By Greg Goldfarb,
Sun Editor

A 21 year old Virginia Beach student working as a waitress has been selected Miss Virginia Beach, 1981.

Kathleen Callan is the daughter of Beach residents Mr. and Mrs. John Francis Callan. Mr. Callan is a college co-ordinator, Saint Leo College, Little Creek Amphibious Base. She has three brothers and three sisters: Jack, 29, owner of a Beach construction company; Michael, 27, a Norfolk tugboat dispatcher; Diane O'Connor, 26, a Beach housewife; Tom, 24, now backpacking through Europe; Maura, 20, a pre-med student at Virginia Tech; and Patricia, 14, an eighth grader at Independence Junior High School.

Florida native
A 15 year Beach resident, Callan is a Jacksonville, FL, native. She lived in Florida until the age of five. She is a 1978 graduate of Princess Anne High School, where she was a cheerleader, two years, and on the gymnastics team, two years. She was also the Princess Anne High School representative in a past Neptune Festival. Businesswise, her interest is in retailing, but as she became older she "became more interested in waitressing because I could make more money at it," she said. Callan has a ballet background, and sings and dances.

She lived for a year in D.C. to decide what she wanted to do with her future, and came back to Virginia Beach ready to sing and be a performer.

She began studying music, ballet, and voice in 1979 at Old Dominion University, Norfolk. She now studies at St. Leo College, taking required English composition courses.

Callan was last year's Miss Virginia Beach first runner-up.

"I was not disappointed to be a performer," she said, "I never expected to get that far." Her vocal selection that year was "The Rose." This year she sang "Out Here on My Own," from the musical "Fame."

"The songs I choose to sing are important because they must reflect a worthy theme," she said. "It's important to give it all you can when you sing. I gave it everything I had this year and it paid off."

Miss Virginia went
Callan will compete on July 11 in Roanoke for the Miss Virginia title. If she wins, she'll compete for Miss America this September in Atlanta, GA.

"I need to have the right song," she emphasized. "That will make me feel confident. Looks mean a lot in these pageants but talent and personality mean more."

"I was surprised to have won this year but I knew I had the drive I needed and the attitude."

Callan's goal in life is to be a performer, and she intends to proceed down every avenue until she reaches it.

"I'm going to take my new title as far as I can," she said, "I love making personal appearances and performing. I hope the title of Miss Virginia Beach will open a lot of doors for me." Callan said unsung heroes of the pageant were the members and director of the Kem-

Beach Show Choir.

Her hobbies include furniture refinishing, sunning, travelling, songwriting and modeling.

Improvements For 2,500,000

The Town of Cape Charles will repair its bulkhead and replace a series of groins along the public beach. In addition, they will nourish the center section of the beach. The resulting beach will constitute the only public beach in the lower section of the Delmarva Peninsula.

The City of Norfolk will use its funds to repair and replace five large groins in the Willoughby section of the City. These groins were originally installed in 1929. Their success to date has been critical to the maintenance of the public beach on Willoughby Spit.

The City of Virginia Beach plans to use its funds for nourishment of the public beach north of Rudee Inlet. This important operation provides a beach for nearly 2,500,000 over-nights and generates nearly $15,500,000 in local and state revenues. The Commission on the Conservation and Development of Public Beaches was formed by legislation drafted by the Coastal Erosion Abatement Study Commission. The Coastal Erosion Abatement Commission is chaired by Senator Joseph T. Fitzpatrick (D), Norfolk.

Beach City Council Report

Beach Water Passing Through Norfolk

'They've Got Us In A Corner'-McCoy

By Lee Cahill,
Sun City Council correspondent

Virginia Beach water customers have to pay almost 10 percent more for water to offset the increased cost of water charged the Beach by the City of Norfolk.

Norfolk adopted a 19 percent across-the-board increase for all customers to make up for an anticipated shortfall resulting from conservation-related lower water usage.

At the same time Norfolk continues to refuse to sign a contract with Virginia Beach to treat water from Virginia Beach wells in western Tidewater which would permit the Beach to use more water leading to more revenues for Norfolk.

City Council Monday afternoon approved an increase in the water rate from $1.31 to $1.44 per 1000 gallons. Norfolk had increased its rate from $637 per 1000 gallons by $122 per 1000 gallons.

Council had already deferred the rate hike two weeks ago and was about to do so again when Mayor Dr. J. Henry McCoy said, "I don't see where conditions have changed since (the last time). We still have no contract."

However, when city manager George L. Hanbury pointed out that the City of Norfolk would be charging the city at the increased rate starting that day, June 1, and recommended Council adopt the new rate so that the city would not be left with the added cost, Council approved the rate ordinance.

The contract did not have anything to do with the water bill, Hanbury said.

"We can't bill our people effective today," Councilman Reid Ervin said, "unless we pass the ordinance."

"I don't like it," said Mayor McCoy, but they've got us in a corner again."

The vote was 9-1 with Councilwoman Reba McClanahan dissenting and Councilman John A. Baum absent.

At the informal meeting earlier, Hanbury told Council that the city started pumping its first western Tidewater well (in Suffolk). Two others are expected to be in operation the first part of the month. With or without the contract with Norfolk, the water is being pumped into the Norfolk reservoir which furnishes water for Norfolk's customers including Virginia Beach.

Councilman Clarence A. Holland, facetiously noted, "We're just testing."

"We'll be testing all summer long," Hanbury replied with equal aplomb.

The wells are intended to furnish Virginia Beach with up to an additional 12 million gallons a day of water it will need during the summer months. The city plans to pay Suffolk and the Counties of Southampton and Isle of Wight for the water and to pay Norfolk for treating the raw water. Norfolk, however, has yet to sign a contract agreeing to treat the water and to carry it through its lines and ultimately to Virginia Beach customers.

Hanbury points out that Norfolk would not have a shortfall if it could treat the additional water from the wells. He said that at the conservation usage of 16.8 MGD for the year, Norfolk's estimated revenue from Virginia Beach is $3.9 million. The 19 percent increase would add $746,000. If Norfolk agreed to transport and treat 10 MGD from Suffolk and Isle of Wight during the summer at the current rate of $.637 it would have an additional $764,000, so no rate increase would be needed.

79 Year Young Reporter

Council wishes Go-Go Happy Birthday

By Lee Cahill,
Sun City Council Correspondent

Mrs. Cassandra "Go-Go" Barnes is a special person in Virginia Beach and was honored in a special way at her favorite hang-out Monday.

The occasion was her 79th birthday, actually the day before on the old Memorial Day, in the City Council boardroom. As she entered the room for the 12:30 p.m. session, everybody—Council members, city staff, citizens and press—broke out in a chorus of "Happy Birthday." A TV camera was there to record the scene, and Mrs. Barnes, who is known as "Go-Go" to Council-goers, was so touched that she volunteered a well-kept secret, her age.

For a second she was concerned. This doesn't mean my demise? she asked.

More than any celebration "Go-Go" wants to continue to be considered a member of the press corps. For the past 21 years she has covered Council meetings, first for the Virginia Beach Sun and then for various radio stations. Unfortunately when the last station she worked for quit operation she was out of a job, but continued "covering" Council meetings. Now, isn't that better than playing bridge? she asked.

After recovering her wits, which are never in short supply, she said she wanted to continue what she was doing for a long time and perhaps have a lover.

A widow, Go-Go lives at the Mayflower Apartments in Virginia Beach, is a member of the Galilea Episcopal Church, and manages to get around to any place of interest in the city although she has no car.

She's an enthusiastic user of public transportation, but has to get rides to and from the Council meetings at Princess Anne Courthouse—sometimes with Councilman Reid Ervin, sometimes with another reporter.

A native of Lynchburg, she has been writing since she was 10, she said, was graduated from Randolph-Macon Woman's College and taught at various places in the country. At one time she taught at a professional children's school in New York where Elizabeth Taylor and Tony Curtis were among her students.

At different times she has one or the other of her grandchildren at the Council meeting with her.

Go-Go is active in Democratic Party politics, plays tennis—usually at Owl's Creek, where she pays the senior citizens' rate and carries her picnic lunch, and is not shy about speaking up at Council meetings when others are inhibited.

Often she has a supply of sourballs with her and will place one at each Council member's place in the Council chambers and pass the rest around among reporters. The large satchel she carries around with all the supplies she could want for the day is her trademark. During one Christmas season it contained a bottle of wine which she insisted upon sharing with her fellow reporters.

Go-Go is so much a part of the scene that a businessman who witnessed the birthday celebration went directly to her to find out how to have his request heard by Council.

Beach City Manager George Hanbury officiated at the cake cutting ceremonies, and received a kiss from Go-Go for his efforts.

Standing, Henley To Serve

Councilman Patrick L. Standing and Councilwoman Barbara Henley will serve on a committee studying zero lot line development requested by the Planning Commission.

Mayor Dr. J. Henry McCoy, Jr. appointed the two Council members Monday afternoon along with city planning director, Robert Scott and Richard Browner, a planning consultant. Dean Lee, chairman of the Planning Commission, will appoint two commission members to the committee.

Zero lot line is a planning concept which permits the location of a residence at the lot line rather than at a required setback.

Captains Want Tax Break

Virginia Beach charter boat captains want their boats to be taxed as business equipment rather than personal property which carries a higher rate.

Councilman Patrick L. Standing said the captains have complained about the tax classification and also about the amusement tax.

City Manager, George L. Hanbury said the only trouble with changing the classification for charter boats is that it would "open another floodgate." He said that now only farm equipment and machinery and tools are taxed (at the lower rate of $1 per $100 valuation). Personal property is taxed at $6 per $100 valuation.

Standing said the tax rate leads to having the boats registered in other states.

Mayor J. Henry McCoy, Jr., a dentist, said that even in his business he pays personal property rates.

Hanbury said that all commercial recreational activities in Virginia Beach, even school plays, are charged an amusement tax.

He said, however, that he would look into both complaints.

Buchanan Sworn In

E. T. Buchanan Monday afternoon was sworn in as Virginia Beach City Council member from the Lynnhaven Borough to fill the unexpired term of Donald Merrick who resigned for reasons of health.

Curtis Fruit, clerk of Circuit Court, swore in the new council member as Mrs. Buchanan and the Buchanans' daughter looked on.

Seventh And Pacific Apts

Permission from Virginia Beach City Council to add ten more units to his apartment project at 7th Street and Pacific Avenue may turn out to be an empty award for developer Robert Epstein.

He's learned that the 10-foot building setback required by the city applies to alleys as well as streets. What he wants is a variance which would permit him to build his complex at the lot line on the alley side. Without the variance, Epstein will have to give up the 10 units.

Council took no action on Epstein's request Monday afternoon.

Fish and Carcasses

The fish have started to come in—and the carcasses out again into the water—contrary to established city procedure.

Virginia Beach City Councilman Patrick L. Standing said that he has received complaints that the city is slow about picking up trash cans where the carcasses are supposed to be placed. As a result the excess is tossed back into the water.

Standing asked that the pick-ups by the city pick up.

Lake Avalon Complaints

Area residents have complained to Virginia Beach City Council that a developer is not meeting his commitments for a landfill operation in Fentress.

The Lakeside Construction Company has a use permit from City Council to fill a borrow pit known as Lake Avalon to nearby landowners. Richard Webbon, president of the Council of Civic Organizations, told Council at an informal session Monday afternoon, that the matter was brought up at the CCO meeting. The lots around the lake had been sold as waterfront property, he said, and now the owner is contemplating filling up the pit and selling the property. He said the question now is whether the permit holder is meeting environmental requirements.

In a letter to Council, the Avalon Hills Civic League, the Cedar Hills Civic League, the Homestead Civic League and the Newlight Civic League claim that the developer has not lived up to a commitment made to Council to remove unsuitable materials which had been dumped in the lake.

The letter states that at the April 6 Council meeting, attorney Grover Wright agreed to remove the unsuitable material, which, Arthur G. Riddell Jr., of the Homestead Civic League, entered into Council's decision not to revoke or further suspend the permit. The letter, signed by Riddell, said that no effort has been made to comply.

Riddell referred to the informal Council session on April 20 when it was reported that unsuitable material was being covered up rather than removed.

D.R. Trueblood, city engineer, in a letter to Mrs. Judith H. Saunders of 5553 Westward Drive, said that the landfill site has been and will continue to be inspected by the city on a daily basis. It further stated that no debris, which is illegal has been observed by city inspectors and that while it is conceivable that some illegal material has been placed in the pit, the city cannot require removal of all the material to uncover minor illegal debris. "This office does not intend to require removal of existing material."

Mayor J. Henry McCoy Jr. said this was "certainly an area that should be reviewed."

Lowe Fills Term

Mrs. Frederick (Nancy) Lowe will fill the unexpired term on the Wetlands Board of E. T. Buchanan who resigned to accept a Virginia Beach City Council seat. She was appointed Monday afternoon by Council to fill the term which will run until September of 1985.

Other appointments made Monday include:

John L. Perry, reappointed for a four-year term on the Social Services Board; Councilman Dr. Clarence A. Holland and city manager George L. Hanbury for a three-year reappointment to the Southeastern Virginia Planning District Commission; Richard Guy, reappointed to a four-year-term on the Tidewater Community College Board (Buchanan, an administrator at the college, abstained); and Mrs. Thomas F. Betz, Jr., reappointed to the Tidewater Regional Group Home Commission.

In Other Actions, Council:

- Approved the applications of Edmund E. Garrett, Catherine Rosetta Garrett, Stanley John Rice and Lillie E. Rice for the closure of two portions of Gum Avenue in the Kempsville Borough.

- Approved the petition of Potters Road Investment Group, a Virginia limited partnership, for the closure of a portion of Old Potters Road in the Lynnhaven Borough.

Letters To The Editor

Give U. Va. Vacancies To Virginians

Editor:

I have received copies of the recent editorial concerning the University of Virginia admissions policy.

If you will check the records, approximately six years ago I introduced legislation in the General Assembly to restrict admission to our crowded medical schools and professional schools, the acceptance of out-of-state students to fifteen percent of the entering class, and every college president in the State of Virginia descended upon me in Richmond under the guise of better education results from mixing with out-of-state students. Needless to say, I lost my bid in the committee and have never attempted to do so again.

I think it's atrocious that any of the state schools supported by the taxpayers would accept more than fifteen percent of out-of-state students.

Professor Advises Class of '81

Editor:

"I shall go just as fast and only as fast as I think I'm right," stated the self-educated 16th president of the United States.

This is the traditional time of extending congratulatory messages to those participating in commencement ceremonies. During this period when advice abounds, it would be beneficial to the students who have achieved this level of academic competence to ponder these words of Abraham Lincoln:

"...Each individual is naturally entitled to do as he pleases with himself and the fruits of his labor, so far as it in no wise interferes with any other rights...Accustomed to trample on the rights of others, you have lost the genius of your own independence..."

The class of 1981 has the opportunity of placing such Lincoln ideals into practice in establishing a world of equality.

I am appalled to realize that the University of Virginia accepts at least thirty-six percent of out-of-state students for their classes.

Keep up the good work and keep the editorials coming, for I still feel that our schools should provide most of the vacancies to the students of the taxpayers of the State of Virginia and not to out-of-state students.

"Seven" Exhibition at Beach

Opening on Wednesday, July 1, the works of seven regional artists will be displayed at the Pavilion Beach Arts Center.

The artists were selected as the top winners of the 1981 Member's Show held at the Pavilion Convention Center last March. This year's juror, Claire Farago, curatorial assistant, Virginia Museum in Richmond, made her choices from over 200 artists, who entered the show.

The Virginia Beach Arts Center sponsors this exhibition as a means to encourage regional artists and to provide the public to see some of the best work produced in the area. Frederick Schmidt, director of the Arts Center, stated that the Arts Center must continue to stimulate individuals to become more involved in the creation of art.

Each artist has been asked to submit five to seven examples of their most recent work for the exhibition. On view during July will be paintings, drawings, photographs, watercolors and pottery.

Mike McMahon of Virginia Beach created several socially satirical assemblages. A graduate of Virginia Commonwealth University, McMahon is employed by Lawler Ballard Advertising in Norfolk. Recently he has exhibited in several Connecticut and New York Galleries.

James Chalkley completed several sensitive porcelain objects created in his studio in Virginia Beach. His work combines simplicity in style, form and glaze with subtle decorative elements on the surface.

Dee Heslop-Proescher graduated from Virginia Wesleyan College before moving to Virginia Beach. She works extensively in the acrylic and pencil medium expressing movement and emotion blended with impressionistic realism in her paintings.

Russell H. Yerkes, who was raised in Virginia Beach, studied at Mansfield State College in Pennsylvania where he majored in art. His watercolors for this exhibition reflect his in extremely detailed images of landscapes and jungle scenes.

Edward G. Carson, a former President of Tidewater Artists Association and the Virginia Beach Arts Center, is one of Tidewater's most widely recognized artists. His works are included in many regional collections such as the Chrysler Museum, United Virginia Bank, and Hanes Corporation. Recently, his work was exhibited in the Virginia Prints and Drawings 1981 show in Richmond.

Rod Mann, primarily a self-taught photographer, strives for a spontaneous quality in his photographs. His objective is to instinctively respond to the sensory stimuli presented to him, making his camera an extension of himself. Mann moved to Virginia Beach in 1970 from the San Francisco area where he was raised.

The exhibition "Seven" will be on view until July 28 at the Virginia Beach Arts Center. The gallery is open Monday thru Saturday from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Beach Man Jailed By IRS

By Bob Kobel, IRS,
Special to The Sun

A Virginia Beach man is spending the next three years in jail because he filed a 1979 income tax return claiming a false refund of $1,214.48.

Cornelius C. Arnold, 47, 4424 Witchduck Rd., was ordered by District Judge Richard B. Kellam to begin serving the sentence immediately following today's U.S. District Court proceeding here.

Arnold had pleaded guilty to the charge May 4. In return, Judge Kellam dismissed three similar charges for 1979 against Arnold. The multiple refund scheme involved four false refunds totaling $2,548.20 as charged in the original four-count indictment returned March 9. Interim U.S. Attorney Justin W. Williams said Arnold's plan was uncovered during the normal procedure of processing returns at the Memphis Service Center.

Arnold, who lists his occupation as a nuclear engineer, was originally arrested on the charges March 16 at Jenkinsville, South Carolina, where he was employed.

Beachers Alerted

Call 'Em Hurricanes

In the Pacific Ocean, they're called typhoons. In the Indian Ocean, they're cyclones. In Virginia Beach, they're known as hurricanes. By any name, the giant whirlwind-type storms that begin over tropical waters are nature's most destructive storms.

As hurricane season begins this month in Chesapeake and the rest of the nation, residents of hurricane-prone areas are urged to recognize the immense fury of these storms and offers some preparedness tips.

1,293 killed

In the last quarter century, 33 hurricanes have struck the continental United States, leaving in their wake 1,293 people dead.

Last year, "Allen" was the only hurricane to hit the United States, but it left two dead and caused $55.7 million of insured losses.

In 1979, the United States experienced two of its worst hurricanes: "Frederic," which swept through 10 states and caused a record $752 million in insured losses, and "David," which hit 12 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, resulting in insured damages of more than $122 million.

June through November is classified as hurricane season, with the highest frequency of hurricanes in August, September and October. The most hurricane-prone areas in the United States are the Atlantic and Gulf Coasts.

Depends on density

Hurricane fatalities depend to a degree on the population density of the area hit by the storm. But statistics show that public awareness of safety precautions can make a big difference in the death toll from storms of similar intensity in like areas.

For example, "Camille" struck the Gulf Coast in 1969 and claimed 256 lives. Twenty-five Mississippi residents refused to evacuate when storm warnings were issued and held a "hurricane party."

Of the 25 partygoers,

the storm left 23 dead.

Ten years later, "Frederic" struck an even broader area in the same region, but the storm took only two lives.

Evacuation important

The importance of evacuation is emphasized by Glenn Taylor, a spokesman for the National Hurricane Center in Miami.

Says Taylor, "You always have some who do not evacuate areas. No matter what they're told, some always stay around. Most people do heed the warnings, though, and have learned lessons from past storms. With 'Frederic,' many thousands evacuated the area."

Inventory your personal property, noting furniture and major personal belongings and listing prices and date of purchase whenever possible.

Review policy coverages

Review your insurance policies. Homeowners and most common business policies do not include coverage for damage from hurricane flood waters.

If your community qualifies, however, this peril can be covered by special flood insurance from the federal government.

Most residential and commercial property insurance policies do cover hurricane wind damage.

The beginning of hurricane season is a good time to make sure that your home is adequately insured.

If you have questions about your policy, contact your insurance representative.

To determine the replacement cost for your home, ask your insurance representative for advice, talk to real estate people or hire a reputable real estate appraiser.

The following safety precautions should be taken after the hurricane passes:

- Watch for loose or dangling power lines and report them immediately.

- Walk or drive cautiously. Debris-filled streets are dangerous and wash-outs may have weakened roads and bridges.

- Do not use water until it is safe to do so. Boil muddy or foul-smelling tap water before drinking.

- Check refrigerated and canned or bottled food for spoilage.

- If your property is damaged:

- Notify your insurance representative and let the representative know where you may be contacted.

- Make temporary repairs to protect property from further damage or looting. Reasonable expenses are covered by most policies or are tax deductible.

- Be patient. While losses will be adjusted and claims paid as quickly as possible, hardship claims usually are handled first.

Last Year Only One Hurricane Hit The U.S.; It Caused $55.7 Million In Damages

Hurricane safety tips include with suggestions for expediting an insurance claim should a hurricane strike.

At the beginning of hurricane season, the following steps should be taken:

Learn the elevation of your area and its storm surge history.

Nine out of 10 deaths during a hurricane are caused by storm surge—the increase in water level.

Trim dead wood from trees around your house since debris can damage a house during a storm.

If you own a boat, determine the method you will use to protect it in the event of a hurricane.

Check for loose gutters and downspouts.

Decide how you will board up your house and have the needed materials.

Obtain and storm emergency supplies before the emergency occurs.

Budget To Exceed $4 Million In 1982

A projected 14 percent increase will push Virginia Wesleyan College's budget over the $4,000,000 mark for fiscal 1982 at a time when college officials expect a leveling of enrollment.

Members of the college's Board of Trustees approved the $4,400,000 annual operating budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1 at the annual spring meeting of the Board on Wednesday (May 20). Major factors in the increase over this year's $3,900,000 budget were substantial jumps in student services and maintenance costs.

Accounting for the largest increase in next year's budget is student support which is a 19.7% increase over last year. Student support for next year will include expanded student services, activities, and facilities. In the area of student services, the trustees approved the new full-time position of Director of Career Planning and Placement and expanded the position of Director of Academic Skills Development for next fall.

Two new faculty positions have been added for next year. A mathematics/computer science instructor and an additional faculty member in the history department will join the Wesleyan staff in the fall.

New student organizations, such as Omicron Delta Kappa, the national leadership/honor society recently chartered here, are being added, and funds have been increased for special events such as convocations, concerts, and performing groups on campus.

Faculty salary increases for the next fiscal year averaged ten percent. Virginia Wesleyan's physical plant has grown from one academic village in 1966 to include a library, science center, Chapel, gymnasium, student services building, two dormitories of a second academic village and a fine arts building which is currently being doubled in size. The trustees got a sneak preview of the $200 square foot fine arts addition on Wednesday, including the new laboratory theater which is being named in honor of Edward D. Hofheimer of Norfolk, a long-time friend and benefactor of the college. It is scheduled for completion this summer.

In addition to the new fine arts facilities, the present service building is in the process of renovation and expansion. Offices of the Dean of Students and the Director of Career Planning and Placement have already been moved to this building. According to Dean of Students W. Thomas Pendergrass, "When the moving of the bookstore to this building is completed during the summer, it will give us a well-rounded Student Services Building." A larger student union is in the college's master plan.

President Lambuth M. Clarke told the trustees that he did not anticipate any increase in enrollment for this fall. The president reported that applications for admission were ten percent greater than last year at this time but, "we really have reached our capacity for the present facilities." More than 60 of the 834 students were housed by the college in nearby apartments and townhouses this year. The dormitories can accommodate approximately 360. About 415 students this year were listed as commuters from Tidewater area cities as far away as Williamsburg.

Dr. Clarke expressed concern about any substantial reduction in federally-funded student aid programs. "A sharp reduction in these programs, particularly the Pell Grants (BEOG), could have a serious impact on all colleges, especially those in the private sector," Clarke said. "I am very thankful that we find ourselves in a strong enrollment position at this time," he added. Student fees account for nearly seventy percent of Wesleyan's annual operating budget. Trustees have previously approved raises in tuition from $3,175 to $3,700 (16.5% increase) and room and board from $1,625 to $1,950 (20% increase).

The trustees approved the appointment on Wednesday of a full-time director of continuing education for January 1982. A limited continuing education program is being planned for the fall of 1982. "This new program will involve non-resident and non-traditional area students from our commuting area in a continuing education experience offered with or without college credit," Dean William M. Wilson told the trustees. The dean noted that about ten percent of Wesleyan's current enrollment is above the age of 25. "The response from these older students has been very favorable," Wilson reported. "They like the small college atmosphere, and some come to study with particular faculty members." He noted older students who commute from Williamsburg and Suffolk. Dr. Wilson said Virginia Wesleyan did not expect the continuing education program to be large in numbers or in the breadth of courses. "Our major efforts," he said, "will continue to be with our full-time baccalaureate candidates, but we have had increasing requests for a limited number of course offerings in the evenings."

Henry Clay Hofheimer II, chairman of the Trustees Development Committee, gave a status report on the $16 million "Challenge for the Eighties" programs. He reported that the $500,000 capital funds campaign for the fine arts building addition has been successfully completed with gifts and pledges totaling $580,000. The facility is scheduled for completion this summer. The additional funds will be used for equipment in the new addition and for modifications of the existing facility and the Student Services Building. (The $200 square foot fine arts addition will house a laboratory theater, multi-media classroom, seminar room, practice rooms and studios for music and theater-communications.

Most of the space in the existing fine arts building will be occupied by painting and ceramics studios and classrooms.)

Hofheimer noted that $120,000 has been received to date on the $175,000 Friends of Wesleyan Annual Fund. James R. Bergdoll, vice president for college relations, said: "This has been one of our most difficult years in the Annual Fund. This fund represents a vitally important five percent of our operating budget. We are hopeful that our Friends will assist the college in meeting this goal by June 30." Nearly 100 area chairmen, captains and team members headed by Ernest M. Lendman, general chairman, are working on the spring Annual Fund emphasis in May.

Hofheimer said that a special emphasis will be placed on seeking endowment funds in 1982. The college has a goal of $10 million in endowment during this decade as part of the "Challenge for the Eighties" programs. Virginia Wesleyan's endowment is now just over $1 million.

Judge Jerry G. Bray Jr., chairman of the Board of Trustees, expressed appreciation to two retiring members of the Board—the first alumnus member of the governing body, Anthony W. Barrett of Nags Head, North Carolina, who is completing a prescribed four-year term, and the Rev. Dr. F. Douglas Dillard, superintendent of the Norfolk District of the United Methodist Church, who is being reassigned to another pastorate next month, after four years on the Wesleyan Board. "Tony Barrett was an excellent choice as the first alumnus trustee and has set a high standard for his successors," said the Board chairman. "and Dr. Dillard has charted a new course in the important relationship between the college and the United Methodist Church."

Beach Soccer Team Wins City Championship Twice In A Row

By Jami Lee Thorntenson,
Special to the Sun

By defeating Independence Junior High School, 2-0, on goals by Frank Sudderth and Jeff Vargas, May 18, the Brandon Junior High School Boys' Soccer team won the city championship for the second consecutive year.

The Chargers, which compiled a record of 6-1, had scored a total of 16 goals this season. All six victories were shutouts, and the Charger defense led by goalkeeper Victor Brant and fullback Mike Presnell, allowed only two goals all season.

Brandon Junior High, which has been in operation for three years now, finished its first year in fourth place, but has since gone on to win not only two consecutive city championships for boys' soccer, but also a city championship for girls' soccer and an undefeated boys' track team this year.

After two consecutive city championships for Brandon Junior High School's boys' soccer team, it does not seem that the Chargers will be letting up. According to Charger coach William C. Bell, "Next year's team should be really good. We have a good nucleus of kids coming back." Out of this year's team's 24 members, the Chargers will have 12 players returning, including six starters.

Awards were presented to the team's two most valuable players: Mark Johns for offense, and Mike Presnell for defense.

Robert Poellnitz received the Coaches Award and Jeff Vargas received the award for Most Improved Player.

Standing: Asst. Coach, Kevin Denson; Dexter Tagbang, Jeff Vargas, John Andre, Victor Brant, Scott Kindell, Tim Mulligan, Robert Poellnitz, and Coach William Bell. Kneeling: (Mgr.), Cristi Crockett; Don Zerblan, Craig Melton, Miguel Pinedo, Allen Valencia, Steve Morales, Brad Alexander, and Charlotte Talkington (Mgr.). ## Beach Unhealthy For Dogs

Rover Not Built For Beach

The beach may be a fun place for people in the summer, but The Humane Society of the United States warns that it can be hazardous for dogs.

"Rover is not built for the beach," warns Phyllis Wright, Director of Animal Sheltering and Control for HSUS. Wright says that hot sun, hot sand, salt water, and insects can combine to make a day at the seaside a miserable - or even fatal - outing for your dog.

The sun itself is the most dangerous enemy at the beach. Dogs don't perspire as people do and they overheat easily. Wright warns that dogs should never be left on the beach between the hours of 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. The sun is simply too intense. If you must take Rover to the beach, be absolutely sure he has enough shade. Rent an umbrella just for him if you have to - unless he's very small the shade from your beach chair won't be enough.

Sand in the paws

Sand is also a prime offender. The pads of a dog's feet have as many nerves as a human's, and if the sand is not enough to burn your feet, it's hot enough to burn your dog's, too. To make matters worse, a dog will lick the burnt foot, ingest the sand, and make himself sick in the process.

If your dog begins panting heavily with his sides heaving, or if his tongue is turning deep red or purple, he may be in the early stages of heat prostration. If this happens, immediate action is necessary to prevent brain damage and death. The important thing is to cool him fast. Douse him with water or wrap a wet towel around him. Feed him ice cubes or ice cream, but never unlimited water. An overheated dog can easily drink itself to death. Even if the dog is not overheated, small amounts of water given frequently are preferable to large amounts given less often.

Kills fleas/dries skin

The ocean can be fun for a dog, but it can also be dangerous. The salt water may kill fleas, but it dries out the skin, which can exacerbate itching problems. Dogs don't understand the effects of things like tides and undertows, so know when he is getting tired and make him come out. Often a dog's loyalty to his master will push him out beyond the breakers to fetch a ball or frisbee when he is simply too tired to get himself safely back to shore.

Wright also reminds owners to remove flea collars before allowing dogs to swim. The chemicals which kill fleas are intensified by water, and too rapid a release can kill the dog along with the fleas.

Also, remember that the fact that your dog has a fur coat does not mean he can't get sunburned. Shaved dogs are especially prone to this, Wright says, another reason to leave your dog's coat its normal length year round.

If you must take your dog to the beach, Wright advises, remember to take all the necessary precautions. The best place for your dog while you enjoy the beach is at home. Wind, surf, and dogs are not a safe combination.

Sims Reports

Information Explosion Reported

By Greg Goldfarb,
Sun editor

Public libraries across the nation are suffering from an information explosion, according to Virginia Beach public library director Marlice Sims. And Virginia Beach feels the impact very heavily.

"I checked it out," Sims said, "and counted approximately 65,000 registered, national organizations. Public libraries aren't required to accommodate, nor have the facilities to accommodate all the publications that may be sent to us for inclusion in public libraries."

Recently, the Beach public library system has been tested by organized factions such as the Ku Klux Klan, or homosexuals, to see if their organizational newspapers can pass through their doors and settle within. Editors of the homosexual organizational newspaper "Our Own," and The American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU), have apparently dropped a court case against the City of Virginia Beach after the acceptance of one issue of "Our Own" per library. The KKK, however, is waiting a reply from the ACLU in response for their bid for legal assistance to provide that their publication is given the same rights as "Our Own."

Sims discerns no reason why the two publications should be treated alike.

"Comparing 'Our Own' and 'The Klansman' is like comparing ring apples and oranges," Sims said, "there is no correlation between the two."

"Our Own" is written and published by local people. The articles contained within the publication pertain to the Tidewater area and Virginia Beach. There also seemed to be little difficulty in determining news and editorials.

"The Klansman," on the otherhand, contained very, very little if no information specifically about the Virginia Beach and Tidewater area. Not only that, but if there were Associated Press and United Press international articles in the publication, the stories were not labeled so. In addition, editorial comments were interjected in the news stories. Let me say, however, that the editorial quality of a publication is a minor point in its evaluation."

How a publication is written is not as important as its elation with the Virginia Beach community. The information explosion is forcing the library officials to look long and hard at a particular publication before including it in the public library system.

"Public libraries are exposed to the entire population, and their organizations," Sims said. "We have neither the space nor the budget to develop a newspaper and periodical collection which would serve the interests of the 65,000 organizations which could take us to court in an attempt to have their publication housed on our shelves."

"If our public library uses a good, fair, selection policy, which it does, the goals for a library are clearly met and collection of newspaper and periodicals are a reflection of those goals."

Beach Library Director, Marlice Sims

Sims said the library system is not built on a majority rule, but by the needs of the community.

The Library's Mission

"One goal of the Virginia Beach Public Library is to guarantee to people of the community free and easy access to recorded information within the limitations of space and budget. The responsibility of the library is to satisfy the diverse reading needs and interests of the residents of the community through selection, acquisition, organization and preservation of library materials and to provide skilled guidance in their use."—Materials Selection Policy, adopted by the Virginia Beach Library Board, September 10, 1979.

"Public libraries are charged with the duty of collecting and offering local information," she said.

"We gather information on a wide array of matters, as a public library should. But, to take it a step further, we must utilize whatever space we have on our library shelves in ways which will best serve the Virginia Beach community; and which also serves to perpetuate the City of Virginia Beach; i.e. we are a resource center for out of town people, companies, and industries that would like specific information about Virginia Beach."

"The public library system is not built on a majority rule, but on a first amendment principle. Any point of view, either popular or unpopular, should be aired in the public library. If we do our job correctly, we will have controversial matter on our library shelves."

Decision's Made Library Officials Stand Firm

By Greg Goldfarb,
Sun Editor

The future is now for Virginia Beach library officials.

Their judgement is sound, and decision is fair to exclude the Ku Klux Klan organizational newsletter "The Klansman" from the Beach public library system.

The KKK is seeking to fight the recent decision by litigation, but the Hooded Order has neither the funds for a courtroom battle, nor a case strong enough for victory.

The American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU), which the KKK has solicited for assistance, has already established criteria for periodical, book, and newspaper selection, contributors must abide by the boards' determination.

The KKK is insisting that because the homosexual newsletter "Our Own" was included on the public shelves, that their publication should. If that is their major premise going into the courtroom, they may as well stay home.

According to the materials selection policy adopted two years ago, library officials have fairly excluded the Klansman for legitimate reasons:

- The Klansman is not typical to Virginia Beach. It is a national publication with no local slant.

- Beach Public Library Director Marlice Sims alleges that the papers' format is not professional i.e. editorial comments interjected into news articles.

- There is not a scarcity of information about the KKK, therefore, no need to include every different publication contributed for in-house circulation.

- The number of requests and demands for information on the KKK is not sufficient to warrant additional library materials on the subject of the KKK.

If higher rulings ever came down, requiring libraries to house all contributed materials, which now seems unconstitutional, Virginia Beach Libraries would have to open their doors annually to tens of thousands of national and international contributed publications. Not only does the system not have the space and personnel to deal with such bulk, it goes against the goal and mission of the public library system.

If Taxes Don't Come Down

Captains Say They'll Go Broke

By Lee Cahill,
Sun City Council Correspondent

There's a chance that charter boat captains will get some relief from the City of Virginia Beach's 10 percent amusement tax.

The boat captains complain that all costs are rising and the amusement tax, which was increased from five to ten percent this year, would put them out of business.

City Council Monday afternoon asked city manager George L. Hanbury to meet with Vernon Hitchens, attorney for the boat captains, to discuss the problem.

Hitchens said Virginia Beach is unique in that no other areas in Virginia or North Carolina apply the amusement tax to the charter boats.

He said that the tax ordinance was aimed at amusements in Virginia Beach and "somebody threw in charter boats, drift boats and party boats."

Hitchens said that while the boats originate from Virginia Beach, they go beyond the three-mile limit which is outside the city's jurisdiction and where the activity takes place.

He said the ordinance violated the Constitutional requirement that everybody be treated equally. The 10 percent tax, he said is attached solely to the admission ticket at other amusements, but the tax in the case of charter boats becomes an income tax. The admission cost represents the entire receipts of the charter boats while at other "amusements" the operators can earn additional income (on food and other attractions) without paying an amusement tax.

He said the captains already are required to buy merchants and business licenses and personal property tax on the boats and slip rentals. Along with these costs, he said the captains have to pay increased fuel prices and supplies.

Hitchens pointed out that deep sea fishing is a tourist industry, but that it has already dropped to the extent that there are no boats at Rudee Inlet. Years ago, he said, it was hard to get a reservation on a boat. Pointing to the captains at the meeting, Hitchens said they wouldn't be there if they had bookings.

He said that the ordinance includes 41 categories. What the captains want is to delete charter boats, drift boats, and party boats.

Hitchens said that the enjoyment on a charter boat is not in Virginia Beach and maintained the tax cuts in to the profits.

Councilman Reid Ervin said it "does look like a point of double jeopardy."

Hanbury pointed out that an added incentive to keeping the tax is the cost of keeping Rudee and Lynnhaven inlets open. He said the city spends a half million dollars a year to keep Rudee open and derives only $32,000 from the taxes.

Hitchens said the Coast Guard should take over Rudee Inlet.

Hanbury said the city has been trying to accomplish just that but hasn't been successful. He said other communities which do not have the amusement tax "do not have the problems we have."

Ervin said he didn't think the $32,000 was intended to fund the dredging.

Councilman Patrick L. Standing, who introduced the subject last week, said that he understood the business was going to die. The cost of operating is so high, the charters simply cannot go out of Rudee Inlet the way they used to do.

Hitchens said that the situation would improve if the city took off the 10 percent.

In answer to a question from W.H. Kitchin III, the captains said their fees have been increased from $165 to $290 and $270 to $360 for a full day. One half-day fee was increased from $180 to $225. One captain said he would have to charge $1200 a trip for a 10 to 15 percent profit while 10 to 15 years ago the profit was over 50 percent.

McCoy, Captain Agree On Tax

"I know for certain that I would like the tax removed completely. And I think I sensed that a majority of Council members feel the same way" - Mayor McCoy agrees that there is a duplication of taxes in this case.

"I can understand their problem," Mayor McCoy said. "If they have to charge $200 for a fishing trip normally, and then have to add on another $20 for an amusement tax, its likely to deter anglers when they can fish in Norfolk charter boats for less money."

In addition to paying taxes to the city, Martens said he also pays 12% of your annual earnings for rent for your boat," Martens said. "And that, coupled with our insurance, ice, bait, fuel, and other expenses leaves us diminishing revenue over the years. Besides, there's not really that much money involved for the city to have to worry about."

Mayor McCoy agrees again.

"We received $32,000 last year from the charter boats," McCoy said. "I don't think that's enough money for Virginia Beach to lose to avoid the risk of imperiling our city's charter fishing business."

Martens said his revenue is already dropping off, even though the season has hardly started. "I'm $10,000 down this year compared to the money I had taken in last year at this time," Martens said. "At this rate, my business will be down by 30 to 40% this year compared to last."

Drop amusement tax

Martens said he would like to see the 10% amusement tax repealed altogether commenting, "If we raise our prices it will affect not only our business but the hotel and restaurant business. I mean, after all, many, many people come to Virginia Beach each Summer just to fish."

City Council has yet to act on the matter, pending a report from City Manager George Hanbury. But, McCoy says he feels the tax may be removed completely.

"I know for certain that I would like the tax removed entirely," McCoy said. "And I think I sensed that a majority of council members feel the same way."

There are approximately 12 marinas in Virginia Beach.

By Greg Goldfarb,
Sun editor

"Virginia Beach commercial charter boat captains are being overtaxed," charges Virginia Beach boat captain Linwood Martens. "Even after grossing $100,000 a year now, I don't take home as much money as I did three years ago when I only grossed $60,000 annually."

Martens, and attorney for the Beach charter boat captains Vernon Hitchens, charge that the City of Virginia Beach is taxing boat captains twice.

"We already pay a business tax and a personal property tax," Martens said. "I think it is unfair for us to have to pay an additional amusement tax. Especially when the amusement is taking place past the three mile limit off the Virginia coast."

What's Allowed?

Pavilion Food Policy Question

One of the biggest problems of food concessionaires in a place like the Pavilion at Virginia Beach is to educate the public, says Arlene Haushalter, assistant food service manager in charge of sales for Serovation, the company with the food contract at the Pavilion.

Contrary to reports, she said, the concession did not run out of food on Saturday during the Republican weekend convention. It also saw to it that a diabetic at the Memorial Day Fica Market was allowed to bring in her own cooler of beverages.

At an informal meeting of Council Monday afternoon Councilwoman Meyers Oberndorf had nothing but praise for the staff and the facilities during the Republican Convention which attracted 8000 people, but he reported complaints about the food concession. She said the food was "enormously expensive" and on Saturday the concession ran out of food and drink.

(See PAVILION page 14)

Pavilion Must Meet Needs

Haushalter said that some of the stands did run out of food such as egg salad sandwiches, tuna fish sandwiches and ham sandwiches, but that the Seromation supplemented the supply with different types of products. "Hamburgers and things which we could get quicker" were substituted, she said.

As for the cost she said, the private company had to charge enough to cover the city's 30 percent share as well as some profit for the company. She said the 30 percent cut compares with 25 to 45 percent all over the country.

At Monday's meeting, Councilwoman Reba McClanahan remarked on the adverse news coverage in Richmond of the food situation. She said she became concerned earlier when the sellers at the Memorial Day flea market were not permitted to bring food into the Pavilion—even diet food. Those people are trying to make a little money, she said. They don't want to spend it all on food.

Haushalter said that the company's contract with the city provides that no outside food shall be permitted in the Pavilion. As for the diet food, she said that they had been made aware of the problem of a diabetic and arranged to have the woman bring in her own cooler.

She said in cases where people have a legitimate health problem the company can make arrangements.

Mayor Dr. J. Henry McCoy Jr. said that the city should reevaluate the situation.

City manager George L. Hanbury said he hadn't been informed that the food had run out. "Running out of food is inexcusable," he said.

Tourists Cling To Street Spaces

Pavilion Lot Empty

By Lee Cahill,
Sun City Council Correspondent

The best laid plans to establish adequate parking for the restrip at Virginia apparently aren't working too well.

Earlier in the year when the city was adding up its parking spaces—at the Dome, at new city parking lots, at the Pavilion, all accessible to the beach by foot or shuttle, plans sounded good. There were enough parking spaces so that the on-street parking along Atlantic Avenue could be relegated to short-term parking with meters operating 24 hours a day.

But beach-goers seem to cling to street parking and avoid the lots—especially the Pavilion lot. Councilwoman Barbara Henley said that on Sunday she noticed that the Pavilion lot was practically empty while people were parked all over illegally. And signs directing the beach-goers to off-street parking were highly visible.

People have been complaining about the 24-hour meters, started this summer, to Council members and whoever will listen.

Councilman Patrick L. Standing, who was absent when Council approved the 24-hour meters, doesn't like them either. He brought up the subject at the informal Council session Monday afternoon.

Councilman Reid Ervin explained that the meter ordinance was passed on the basis of a report from the innkeepers but they have since claimed the 24-hour meter charge was not in the report, he said.

City manager George L. Hanbury said that trying to regulate hours last year was as bad as giving tickets 24 hours a day this year. He said that trying to meet every little problem is impossible. The alternative to the meters is to ban all parking on Atlantic Avenue, he said, adding that delivery truck personnel has also complained.

The meters have a two-hour limit and users are disturbed about having to stop whatever they are doing to feed the meters.

Councilman W.H. Kitchin III explained that the city didn't have time to change the time limits on the meters or the fines for this season. Hanbury said, however, that he would recommend increasing fines when some 50,000 parking tickets already printed are used up.

Kitchin said the object of the meters is to stimulate turnover. He admitted that it seemed strange to have meters operating at night but added that the police were probably too busy with more important things at night to have time to enforce the meter ordinance strictly. "If you're sleeping in a car in the morning you'll get a ticket. But it's cheaper than staying at a motel." He said that he has found that owners of the businesses who are complaining are using the parking spaces for themselves.

He said he knew that the police were ticketing cars at 8 a.m. because he got one—and paid for it.

Councilman Harold Heischberger said that he finds the complaints are not over 24-hour parking but about underlining. He said that he saw large signs and signs on the meter heads. However, it's difficult to read the signs on the meter heads at night, he said.

Hanbury said that when the city had huge signs saying no parking, people said they didn't read the signs because the presence of meters led them to believe parking was permitted.

He said that in most places where there are no meters no parking is allowed. Streets in other resort communities with as much traffic as Atlantic Avenue do not allow parking.

Mayor J. Henry McCoy Jr. said he thought local people were doing most of the complaining rather than the tourists.

Kitchin said there are signs posted "but if you put a sign on every meter they won't see it. (They will say), 'A sign? What sign?' They will take the sign off. It's amazing what people will do to get out of paying 25 cents (the minimum meter charge)."

Ervin said that the city compared meter charges with other communities. "I don't think our charges are as high as most of them."

"I'm sorry I brought the whole subject up," Standing said, and related the annoyance he felt when he was in a restaurant and knew he had to get out in one hour and 45 minutes to feed the meter.

Councilwoman Reba McClanahan said only that when parking decisions are made next year, she didn't want to make decisions one week before they go into effect.

Private Ambulances

Permits Needed

Private ambulance services will need a permit to operate in Virginia Beach under an ordinance approved Monday afternoon by City Council.

Some Council members were concerned that the ordinance could create more bureaucracy and would lead to the regulation of private enterprise. Councilman Dr. Clarence A. Holland said the ordinance was an attempt to give better service and better utilization of emergency equipment. He said that although hospitalization insurance will pay for private ambulance service, "there is a tremendous lot of difference between ambulances." He said the ordinance may actually help private ambulance services.

The ordinance requires any organizations that want to operate an emergency medical service agency in the city, except for the Office of Emergency Services, the city's volunteer rescue service, to get a permit. City manager George L. Hanbury said that although the State now licenses all private agencies, there is no control over the level of care. Under the ordinance each agency will be reviewed by the volunteer service medical directors.

Four private agencies operate in the area—one in Virginia Beach, one in Chesapeake and two in Norfolk.

Hanbury said that the volunteer rescue squads have more advanced equipment. When private ambulances answer a call they sometimes find they are not equipped to handle the situation and have to call the rescue squad. As a result the trip is wasted and answering time lengthened.

Bruce Edwards, coordinator for the city's Emergency Medical Agency, said with the ordinance the client will call 911, the emergency number, and the rescue squad will determine whether more sophisticated care is needed or whether a private ambulance service could do the job. He said that Norfolk, which operates a municipal service, has a similar ordinance.

Edwards explained that using a private ambulance for the less-severe cases would leave the rescue squad available for more critical cases.

Hanbury said that with the ordinance "you won't have two ambulances going to the same place at the same time."

Councilman Reid Ervin asked whether the provision would mean an increase in the budget and whether it represented "one more step in bureaucracy than we initially intended."

Councilwoman Reba McClanahan said there already are state laws regulating the service. "I don't think it's necessary. If a private ambulance appears at the same time as ours, they should be concerned." She said no more regulation is needed and that people were happy under the present setup. McClanahan said that bureaucracy grows.

Ervin elaborated. He said most of the people in the paid department were formerly members of the volunteer service.

Hanbury said that the volunteer experience served as a good apprenticeship program.

Ervin replied that this was all right so long as the volunteers do not encourage their own employment.

Edwards said that some agencies try to undercut others, but to arrive at the lower fees they have to cut back on care.

Edwards said that rescue squads are reluctant to take simple transport cases for fear that the service will not be available for more critical cases. These less severe cases can be referred to private agencies.

Hanbury said the private sector recommended passage of the ordinance. Nobody was present at the meeting to oppose the ordinance.

Hanbury said the city did not want to regulate free enterprise.

The ordinance was approved by a vote of 9-2 with Councilman Dr. E.T. Buchanan and Councilwoman McClanahan dissenting.

Ervin asked that Council as a later session be informed more fully on how the $371,000 emergency medical services budget is spent.

Beach City Council Report

Council Approves Zoning Change

CBN Expects 3000 Students By 1991

By Lee Cahill,
Sun City Council Correspondent

Rezoning approved for all but 35.3 acres of a 160.8-acre parcel makes way for a Christian Broadcasting Network (CBN) complex that will include a restaurant, a motel and convention complex, a printing establishment and shopping center, and room for expansion of its broadcasting facilities and graduate university.

The only request which did not win approval by from Virginia Beach City Council Monday afternoon was for a rezoning from R-8 Residential District to A-2 Apartment District on a 35.3-acre parcel on Centerville Turnpike. Council referred the application back to the Planning commission, Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf, who made the motion to return the matter to the Planning commission, said the intent was not to rezone the property A-2, but to consider a way CBN could construct housing without increasing density and "be fair to all neighbors."

The concern of the Planning Commission in recommending denial of the application was that the rezoning would set a precedent which would encourage other property owners in Kempsville to apply for higher density zoning. Referral was approved by a 7-1 vote with Councilwoman Reba Mcclanahan dissenting and Mayor Dr. J. Henry McCoy Jr. and Councilmen John A. Baum and Patrick L. Standing absent.

The present zoning allows the construction of 760 duplexes. CBN wants to use the property for construction of apartments for students and faculty members of CBN University and employees of the complex at the intersection of Indian River Road and Centerville Turnpike where the CBN operations building and the CBN University building are now located.

Grover Wright, attorney for CBN, has said that CBN plans to build no more than 15 units per acre although A-2 zoning would allow 18 units per acre. He said that student housing, which would be possible with a use permit would not answer the needs of the faculty members and employees among the prospective tenants.

Don Petry, vice president of administration for CBN, said CBN expects 50 percent of the community to live in the complex. The average age of the students (all graduate students) will be 30, he said. He added that the entire complex is expected to be completed within five to ten years and that the present student body of 150 is expected to increase to 3,000 in ten years. CBN also has 1000 employees.

Of the six remaining rezoning applications only one met any opposition—the application to rezone from R-8 residential District to B-2 Community-business District a 28-acre parcel in the vicinity of the intersection of Indian River Road and Centerville Turnpike.

Members of the Newlight Civic League objected to having a business district adjoining their residential community. Council voted 6-2 in favor of the rezoning with Councilwomen Meyera Oberndorf and Barbara Henley dissenting.

Oberndorf said that even with improvements Indian River road will be able to handle only a certain amount of traffic. She said that growth can also be expected from other undeveloped property along the arterial and that she feared further strip commercial.

City manager George L. Hanbury said that if there is any justification for business zoning "this is it." He said the road is the only I-64 interchange in Virginia Beach.

Oberndorf pointed out that Council also rezoned land "at the other end" for a service station "to catch business before it gets to Chesapeake."

"We have to look at what the future requests will be all along that corridor," she said. To Wright, she said has pointed out to Council that each application should be considered on its merits, but that she also has heard him reverse himself and use precedent as an argument.

Wright said that having business establishments on the property will internalize traffic. It makes sense, he said, to have facilities to which people can walk.

"You mean that the parcel won't have an entrance from Indian River road. Are you saying this shopping center will only have an entrance from the main entrance?"

Wright said no, that the site plans are not ready.

Wright said that CBN already has 28.3 acres zoned B-2. All CBN wants to do is relocate the business area to 33.7 acres. After dedication for a relocated Centerville Turnpike and a relocation of the 150 foot Cedar Hill Canal along with a 150 foot R-8 buffer between the center and the Newlight community, Wright said that only about 16 acres will be left for development.

Councilman Reid Ervin said that the traffic increase would be there if CBN were not because of the impact of changing land uses.

Centerville Turnpike will be relocated eastward so that it will run through the CBN property. Among the conditions of the rezoning is that CBN dedicates a 110-foot right of way for Centerville Turnpike relocated and 150-foot drainage easement for the relocation of the Cedar Hill Canal. Also required is the dedication of an additional right of way along the site's frontage on Indian River Road to provide for a future eight-lane roadway.

The applicant also has voluntarily agreed a 150-foot buffer along the eastern property line will remain R-8 Residential District and a 150-foot buffer along the Southern property line will remain R-5 Residential District.

CBN also will design the ultimate four-lane Section of Centerville Turnpike relocated and construct two of the four lanes.

Hanbury said that the Centerville Turnpike would be relocated and if CBN will help pay for it, that will be fine. He said the project is five to ten years off, depending in the progress of the CBN Development.

CBN has 375 acres in the area altogether. The remaining 215 acres are zoned industrial.

Wright said CBN wanted to be able to control the architecture at the complex so that it would be compatible with CBN and CBN University. He said that the only zoning not in place on the site is H-1 (hotel). The parcel already has office, commercial and R-8 Residential.

To allay fears that strip commercial along Indian River Road would develop with the business zoning, he said that the 150-foot canal would make the perfect buffer and a logical place to stop business zoning.

Approved by 8-0 votes were:
Rezoning from O-1 Office District to B-2 Community Business District on a 5.7 acre parcel.

Rezoning from B-2 Community Business District to H-1 Hotel District on a 6.8-acre parcel.

Rezoning from R-8 Residential District to H-1 Hotel District on a 7.1 acre parcel.

Rezoning from R-8 Residential District to O-1 Office District on a 56.4 acre parcel.

Rezoning from B-2 Community Business District to O-1 Office District on a 21.5-acre parcel.

State Causing Road Delays

Delays, mostly caused by the State Department of Highways and Transportation, are clogging Virginia Beach road projects.

City manager George L. Hanbury told city council Monday afternoon at an informal session that Witchduck Road seems to be the only new project that is going to be completed any time soon.

Hanbury

Witchduck Road seems to be the only new project that is going to be completed any time soon, according to Hanbury.

He said that arguing about money is one thing (many projects have been delayed because of a shortage in State road money) but the city will lose over a million dollars on the Princess Anne Road project because of the State's delays for reasons other than money.

He said that Princess Anne Road Phase 2 from Edwin Drive is going to be paid in part by the Navy ($2 million) which requires that it go through the SDHT. Although the state is not paying one penny for the project, Hanbury said, it has done nothing but delay the project, costing Virginia Beach more money. This project isn't expected to be constructed until 1983.

Public Works Director Oral Lambert gave a status report of other road projects not in the referendum projects as follows:

For Police

Beach Purchases 39 New LTD's

The City of Virginia Beach will save $53,157 through the purchase of 39 Ford LTD's for the Police Department.

The savings is being realized because the Ford Motor Company is allowing the city to purchase the vehicles on the 1981 production order at the same bid price offered to the State Police Department. The cost per car, equipped with a police package, is $7,437 compared to a city-estimated unit cost of $8,800.

City Council Monday afternoon appropriated $290,043 for the purchase. Councilwoman Meyera Oberdorf abstained and Mayor Dr. J. Henry McCoy Jr., John A. Baum and Patrick L. Standing were absent.

Charity Neck Bridge Closed Until Friday

The Virginia Beach Department of Public Works, Highway Division has scheduled repairs to the Charity Neck Bridge on June 15 through June 18. During this time period the bridge will be closed to vehicular traffic. The detour routes will be by way of Pleasant Ridge Road or Gum Bridge Road.

Miss Virginia Beach Honored

Miss Kathleen Callan, Miss Virginia Beach 1981, was presented a framed resolution in her honor by Virginia Beach City Council Monday afternoon.

Victim Witness Continues

The Division of Justice and Crime Prevention has awarded a $39,824 grant to Virginia Beach to continue the victim-witness program from July 1, 1981 through June 30, 1982.

The program provides for one staff person to act as a liaison for victims and witnesses in the city's Circuit Court by keeping victims and witnesses informed of trial date changes, providing information about the criminal justice system and generally acting as a guide for the victims and witnesses.

City Council appropriated the funds Monday afternoon.

Water Money Approved

A $20,460 appropriation was approved Monday afternoon by Virginia Beach City Council as the city's share of a $66,000 engineering project associated with the development of Somerton Creek in Suffolk and Assamook Swamp in Southampton and Sussex Counties as water sources for Southeastern Virginia.

Parking Permits Sought

Older resort hotels with fewer parking spaces than are required under the present zoning ordinances are having problems with Virginia Beach's 24-hour meter enforcement.

Councilman W. H. Kitchin III said at an informal meeting of Council Monday afternoon that some hotel guests at these hotels often park on the street overnight. But since the city adopted 24-hour meters this year, they are faced with having to get up every two hours to feed the meters or be fined.

Kitchin asked whether these hotels could be sold certain numbers of "permits" which could be used by hotel guests at on-street parking spaces, exempting them from a fine.

Kitchin pointed out that prior to 1964 many of the hotels were allowed to build with parking provided for only 80 percent of their ac-

Car Window Stickers May Allow Parking

commodations. He said he was called by one guest and two owners who said that the 34-hour meters created a hardship for the older hotels with inadequate parking.

City manager George L. Hanbury said he wouldn't recommend it. When the innkeepers asked for 80 percent parking, he said, it didn't mean that the public was going to provide the remaining parking. He said it was authorized because hotels were not full at all times and that the absence of a restaurant in the establishment reduced the need even more.

Kitchin said now 100 percent parking is required but every business gets a variance.

Hanbury said that people in every other part of the waterfront area will want permits.

Councilman Patrick L. Standing said the city can't grant exclusive rights to private property owners.

Hanbury said he wasn't sure whether the city could charge for permit parking other than the cost of the permit. "I'd just as soon we didn't go into it because we've got a lot of requests for it."

Kitchin said he wasn't thinking of reserving spaces, but of placing stickers in a car which would allow the guest to park overnight, so long as the guest could find an empty space.

He asked Hanbury to give it a little thought.

Kitchin also said that some businesses with conditional use permits are not living within requirements of the permit. He said, for instance, one bicycle rental operation is on city property. The owner said that the business can't be seen otherwise. "If we're going to give one person the right to operate on city property we're going to have to give everybody the right."

Among other items discussed:

Councilwoman Reba McClanahan wanted to know whether the purchasing freeze had been lifted? If not, "Where did the furniture (in the entrance to the Mayor's office) come from?"

Standing said he had ordered it when he was mayor - that's how long it takes to get things done.

Councilwoman Barbara Henley said that reading about the Federal budget cuts made her nervous, especially in relation to the loss of impact funds for schools. She said she was disturbed also about the poor relationship between the School Board and City Council.

Councilman Reid Ervin asked whether Council was planning to get together with the School Board early in the budget process for next year.

Vice Mayor Harold Heischouer, presiding in the absence of Mayor Dr. J. Henry McCoy Jr., said that McCoy was planning to appoint a committee to work with the staff on the budget and to report back to Council.

Charter Boats Tax Exempt

Charter boats will be exempted from Virginia Beach's 10 percent amusement tax under an ordinance which will be considered by City Council next Monday.

The amendment will make the tax apply only within the City of Virginia Beach plus one mile offshore. The amendment clarifying of the city's jurisdiction will exempt charter boats which generally operate beyond the three-mile limit.

City attorney George L. Hanbury Monday afternoon informed attorney Vernon Hitchings, who is representing the charter boat captains, that city attorney Dale Bimson has been requested to prepare the amendment.

The captains had complained that the tax, added to their other inflated expenses was killing their businesses. They also said the tax was unfair because the amusement on the charter boat took place beyond the three-mile limit and the city's jurisdiction and because admission, on which the tax is based represents total receipts. For other amusements, the entrance fee, which is taxed, is not the only income derived from the operation, they said.

Beach Student Wants JROTC Program Funded

A member of the Junior ROTC asked Virginia Beach City Council to support efforts to keep JROTC in six city high schools.

Richard Nelson told Council Monday afternoon that the School Board will merge the six units into three leaving Bayside, Cox and Kellam without ROTC units.

Nelson said that the Navy pays half the cost of the training and the School Board pays the other half.

Councilman Reid Ervin said that Council doesn't control how the school board money is spent, but that "you have my moral support."

Nelson said that the schools won't provide transportation between the schools and the trip is over 30 minutes for some. There is no way a student can make it to class on a five-minute break.

He said the schools also want the students to pay for the heat and electricity because the building used is an outside building. He said for this reason the students want a room inside the building.

Nelson said the program helps teach students leadership and citizen responsibility, and the training means a pay raise in any of the services as well as scholarships. "We want the Council behind us 100 percent," he said.

He said the number of training sites was reduced when the School Board wanted to eliminate one of the two instructors at each site. When the Navy said it needed two, the number of sites was cut.

SUNshine Girl

Crosswhite

Employed By Eastern

Crosswhite Heads to N.Y.

A Virginia Beach native, Ashley Crosswhite is the 24 year old daughter of Beach residents Mr. and Mrs. J.T. Crosswhite.

A 1974 graduate of First Colonial High School, her high school activities included participation in sororities, cheerleading, and working part-time as a clothes saleslady. Also during high school, she said, she enjoyed her leisure time very much.

"I used to love to horseback ride," Ashley said. "I did it regularly for six years. I also spent a lot of time in Croatan swimming and sunning."

Following high school, Ashley attended Radford University for three years, studying fashion merchandising.

"Academically, I did pretty well there," she said. "I joined some business clubs and kept real busy. But I became restless and decided to move back to the beach."

After returning to the Beach Ashley worked in the cosmetic section of a local department store. She is currently a hostess at C.C. Wheeler's restaurant and lounge and plans to join Eastern Airlines as a stewardess this fall.

"I feel really lucky to have been accepted by Eastern," she said.

"I just applied for the job last September, and received it in a relatively short length of time. New York will be my home while working for Eastern, but first I will attend a four week training school in Miami, Fl."

She enjoys listening to soft rock music, and dancing at Rogue's. She likes to eat Chinese food; going to the beach; and roller skating as fast as she can.

"I love the sun, the people, and the sand in Virginia Beach," she said. "I also like roller skating, I skate alot, and as fast as I can!"

"We're Here For Beach Week!"

"We're here for Beach Week," said Colonial Heights residents (l-r) Sheila Pope, 18, Susan Garber, 19, Joanna Brown, 17, and Sherry Vaughan, 18. "We come here every year at this time," the students said.

"We like Virginia Beach because other beaches we have gone to are much more crowded than Virginia Beach. But, Virginia Beach has more of an erosion problem than the other cities we have visited. But nonetheless, we will always return here."

They stayed in a cottage on 24th street.

Aran, Carman and Mesa

"We Heard It Was Good"

"We had heard so much about Virginia Beach," said Jose Aran, "that we had to come to see for ourselves how good it was. We usually come for a few days at a time."

Aran, who is staying at the Strawberry Banks Motor Inn, in Hampton, said he chose that location because it is between Kings Dominion, The Old Country and Virginia Beach.

"We like Virginia Beach and will be back next year."

With Aran are Mesa Carman and Alex Mesa, from Pennsylvania. Aran is from Richmond.

Closer Than Nags Head

A 21 year old VCU P.E. major from Richmond, Mike Beasley says he comes to Virginia Beach every weekend.

"It's a lot closer than Nags Head," he said. "I know a lot of people here. Usually I come for the day, because it cost so much to stay in a hotel. But I always have a great time, and I love it."

Letters To The Editor

U.Va. Ed Draws Comment

Editor:

I read, with interest, the letter of State Senator William E. Fears regarding the admission policy of the University of Virginia. As a graduate of that school, I feel his comments should not go unanswered.

Traditionally, the funds to operate the University have come one-third from the state, one-third from student tuition, and one-third from private funds and endowment. The out of state student pays a greater tuition, by far, than the in state student. Graduates from outside of Virginia have supported the endowment of the University, to a much greater extent, than in state students. The fact the University has schools of law, medicine, and business, that are recognized nationally, is a tribute to Mr. Jefferson's concept of academic excellence. I, for one, hope that the University of Virginia will continue to be a center of learning, which attracts the finest students in the United States, and which educates the type of leaders envisioned by Mr. Jefferson.

Veterans Say Thank You

Editor:

The Fleet Reserve Association as well as the Veterans Advisory Committee cannot thank you enough for your fine support that made Memorial Day a very memorable day for the entire Tidewater community. Without the unselfish support of folks like and organizations such as yours, it would be most difficult for us to keep the true meaning of patriotism alive, and the spirit and heritage of America in this country certainly could not survive.

It is most gratifying, especially in the turmoil the world is in today, to report to you that we had the finest showing of patriotism and dedication as well as numbers of people who came out in full force to support this very meaningful Memorial Day program. This past Memorial Day had a very special meaning to many, many people, and the hard work and dedication by the many people involved was indeed a true showing that patriotism is still alive and well in this great country that we have today and that the many sacrifices that have been made down through the years have not been, and will not be, forgotten.

In the past, we talked about hundreds of people turning out, but this program turned out thousands of participants as well as members of the public, and we were most impressed with the number of young people who participated with us. I believe this spirit of patriotism and sacrifices is starting to indelibly mark the young of our country, and if this is so, the great heritage that certainly belongs to our young in this great country will never die.

Thank you for your most generous contribution to our success and have a great day, fellow American!

Environmental Law To Be Discussed

By Richard Johnstone,
Special to the Sun

The Virginia State Bar's various sections, or groups of attorneys interested in specific fields of law, will offer a wide variety of professional development workshops at the State Bar's 43rd Annual Meeting.

One of the most timely and provocative of the section programs on Friday, June 19, will feature U.S. Senator Robert T. Stafford (R-Vt.), chairman of the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee, discussing "Public Environmental Law in the 1980s."

During this program (10:45 a.m., Cape Henry Room, Holiday Inn) Stafford will examine the conflict between groups interested in improving the environment through such laws as the Clean Air Act and the Toxic Substances Control Act, and critics of these laws who contend that they have hindered needed economic growth and caused American productivity to lag behind that of other countries. Congress is now re-examining the two major laws listed above.

Stafford, architect in the 96th Congress of the landmark "superfund" legislation aimed at cleaning up poisonous waste releases, will discuss the topic from his perspective as one of the leading national policymakers in environmental law.

After his remarks, Sen. Stafford will be joined in a panel discussion of this topic from the viewpoints of businesses trying to understand this new body of law and how it affects new ventures; executive agencies charged with enforcing environmental mandates at the state and federal levels; and conservationists seeking to have public interest concerns considered in private-sector decisions.

This program, sponsored by the State Bar's Environmental Law Section, is open to members of the public. There will be an opportunity for questions from audience members at the program's conclusion.

Other State Bar section programs on June 19 are: Family Law Practice - "Handling Support Cases from the Standpoint of the Petitioner, the Respondent and the Judge" (9 a.m., Coral C & D, Cavalier Oceanfront); Antitrust Law Practice - "Post-Indictment Defense of a Criminal Price-Fixing Case" (9 a.m., Coral B, Cavalier Oceanfront); Criminal Law Practice - "Corporate Crime and Punishment as They Interface between the Business Lawyer and the Criminal Lawyer" (9:30 a.m., Coral A, Cavalier Oceanfront); Business Law Practice - "Contract Drafting to Survive Litigation" (9:30 a.m., Croatan, Holiday Inn); Litigation Practice - "What the Bench Expects from the Trial Bar" (9:30 a.m., Coral E, Cavalier Oceanfront); Taxation/Trusts and Estates Practice - "Jointly-Held Property—Tax and Other Considerations" (10 a.m., False Cape, Holiday Inn); Patent, Trademark and Copyright Law Practice - "The Lawyer Lobbyist" (10:30 a.m., Amphitheater B, Holiday Inn); Real Property Practice - "Representing the Foreign Investor" (10:30 a.m., Skytop, Holiday Inn); Construction Law Practice - "The Anatomy of a Construction Project" (2 p.m., Cape Henry, Holiday Inn); and International Law Practice - "International Law for the Practicing Attorney" (2:30 p.m., Croatan, Holiday Inn).

Helpful Hints Listed

Prevent Problems In Beach Gardens

If the Virginia Beach home vegetable garden, which has taken so much labor, has a few problems, perhaps they can be diagnosed and prevented next year.

There are many possible causes and cures for the variety of problems that a home vegetable garden suffers, said Virginia Tech Extension specialist in home horticulture, Diane Relf. She listed some common problems and their solutions.

If the young plants are dying, it is possible they are suffering fertilizer burn. Next time, the gardener needs to be sure the fertilizer is mixed more evenly in the soil, or that less fertilizer is used.

Or the young plants may be dying from too much water. In this case, a possible solution is to apply any water in the morning. Then, if possible, select a well-drained garden site in the future.

Stunted plants that are pale or "yellowish" in color may be caused by a variety of problems. If it seems to be low soil fertility, add two or three pounds of fertilizer for every 100 square feet. If it seems to be poor soil drainage, add organic matter next fall when you plow the garden to improve drainage.

If the soil is shallow or compacted, plow deeper into the ground the next time and add organic matter. Insects or plant diseases may be causing the stunted growth, in which case, the gardener needs to identify the insect or disease and use currently recommended control measures.

Purplish plants
If stunted plants show a "purplish" color, other factors may be the culprits. Low temperatures will cause this. The only solution is to wait for warmer weather, said Relf, or to protect the plants from frost. If there hasn't been cold weather, then the problem may be lack of phosphorus in the soil and it should be added.

Wilting plants can be caused by either dry soil or excess water. If it has been dry, water the plants, and if it has been rainy, dig ditches to drain the surface water away from the plants, the specialist suggested.

Wilting also can be caused by disease, fungus or nematodes, in which case it is necessary to identify the cause and take the recommended action. For many vegetables, it is possible to get varieties that are resistant and these should be planted next season.

Weak, spindly plants can be caused by too much shade. The solution is to move the garden to a sunny location. Too much water also is a hazard, which can be remedied by digging ditches to drain the water. Or, the cause could be the plants are too close together and thinning the plants will help.

Too much nitrogen in the soil also will cause weak, spindly plants. The gardener should avoid additional nitrogen fertilization, said the member of Tech's College of Agriculture and Life Sciences faculty.

Holes in leaves, most likely caused by insects. A gardener needs to identify the insect and use the recommended control measures.

Spots, molds and darkened areas on leaves and stems can be caused by disease. After the disease is identified, recommended control measures may reduce further damage.

Resistant varieties
Consider planting

resistant varieties for the next crop, the specialist said. The same kinds of symptoms can be caused by fertilizer burn. In this case the gardener needs to wash the plants if fertilizer comes in contact with leaves and plan to be careful in the future.

Fruit failing to set can be caused by both high and low temperature. If caused by high temperatures, it will probably improve early in the fall as the weather cools. If the temperature is too low, the gardener should try to protect the plants from freezing. Insects also can prevent fruit from setting, in which case the insects need to be identified and the recommended controls used.

often called catfacing, are caused when there is cool weather during blooming. A different tomato variety might not be as susceptible.

Misshaped carrots and beets can be caused by the plants being too close together. They should be thinned as early as possible. Nematodes also could be the cause of misshaped carrots and beets, in which case, the gardener needs to rotate their place in the garden with resistant vegetables. If the problem is severe, the gardener also should consider soil fumigation.

Heavy or stony soil can be a part of the problem, too. The solution is to remove the stones and incorporate organic matter in the soil.

There still are many other common problems that reduce the harvest in the home vegetable garden, Relf said, but many can be avoided or minimized.

Homeowners With Shallow Wells Urged To Conserve

The Virginia Beach Department of Agriculture advises homeowners with shallow wells to conserve water. With the increased number of wells being used, many of these could go dry.

Virginia Beach News Review

News, Sports, entertainment, Council Reviewed

By Greg Goldfarb,
Sun Editor

While many Beach residents have been working or taking it easy so far this Summer, the local news events rests.

Recent developments in Virginia Beach news include:

★ Bacteria count in Lynnhaven estuaries has reached 30 times the maximum limit allowed for safe shellfishing. The result: The entire Lynnhaven River has been closed, at least through July.

The bacteria, fecal coliform, according to the State Health Department and Water control Board, grew due to rain washing bacteria producing contaminants into shallow Lynnhaven estuaries. State health officials are required to ban shellfishing when water sampling shows fecal coliform counts above 14 percent per 100 milliliters of water.

The bacteria, which may not be harmful, may suggest an environment for breeding disease bearing bacteria.

Swimming in the river should not be affected, unless the bacteria count rises significantly.

Broad Bay, was not affected by the ban, however, about two dozen oystermen are apt to lost work due to the ban. Crabs, cooked well, should not be contaminated.

★ After four years away from Virginia Beach, 40 television shows, and two films, Beach film star Tara Buckman returned to Virginia Beach recently to see her family and wish her sister, Kendel, best wishes who is getting married.

Tara came back excited back excited about Hollywood and waiting to make more motion pictures. She has been a regular in the series "Lobo," and appreciates the experience she has gained from working on the show, but says she's ready to move on.

★ The City of Virginia Beach could be fined $145,000 by Norfolk because of greedy Beach water users.

In June, Beach water users have exceeded their drought quota by an average of 1.8 million gallons a day, and is increasing as the hot Summer drags on.

Lynnhaven River Closed Due To High Bacteria Count

★ Virginia Beach resident Juice Newton and Philadelphia Leon Redbone have both given recent, separate, performances in Rogue's nightclub, in Virginia Beach.

While both performers received warm receptions from the audiences, Redbone drew heavily from songs written in the 1930's while Newton played more contemporary material. The concerts serve to show the diversity of music offered in Virginia Beach.

★ Princess Anne High School graduate George Butts, 24, has signed a three year contract with the Washington Redskins as a free agent.

Also a standout at Norfolk State, Butts, a linebacker, received a $10,000 bonus, but has to make the team to receive the money his contract calls for.

Butts had been signed by the Ottawa Roughriders of the Canadian Football League, and had started their first two exhibition games this season. But the Redskins took interest in him, and the Riders released him.

★ Beach Mayor J. Henry McCoy, Jr., has announced that the water ban in Virginia Beach should be lifted, per decision by Governor John Dalton.

And because the drought may not be over, City Manager George Hanbury said he will look into the matter.

★ London Bridge residents can expect more company.

The Beach Planning Commission recently approved 50 acres to be used for a new residential subdivision off London Bridge Road.

The land is part of a 300 home, 64 acre development, the need for housing convinced planners to approve the request, from developers White and Hoff Associates.

Oceans informed the city that the subdivision would fall in a medium noise zone.

★ Parking rules on Atlantic Avenue are annoying council members and tourists alike. "It's a mess," Hanbury said, referring to 24 hour parking meters, and added that he will look into the situation.

★ Patio operators on the Beach boardwalk will be allowed to continue to conduct business at least for the Summer. On July 13, hotel owners will meet in court to decide what will be future policy. Until then food and drink consumption on open air cafes continue.

Beach City Council Report

16 Acres At Lynnhaven Inlet

Spoil Site, Boat Ramp Gets Nod

By Lee Cahill,
Sun City Council Correspondent

Virginia Beach City Council has decided to condemn approximately 16 acres of land at Lynnhaven Inlet to use as a spoil site.

Estimates on the cost of the land have run up to $1 million.

Council Monday evening authorized City Attorney Dale Binson to condemn the property. An attempt by Councilman Dr. E.T. Buchanan to restrict use of the property to a spoil site failed, leaving the way open for the city to construct a boat ramp on part of the site at a later date. Although the ordinance approved by Council Monday dealt strictly with the acquisition of the property, Council on Oct. 2, 1978 approved a resolution seeking approval from the various State and Federal agencies to use the property as a municipally-owned spoil site and recreational boating facility.

The property, located immediately southwest of Lesser Bridge at Lynnhaven Inlet, is commonly known as the Winder property.

The site will receive materials from the dredging of the Inlet by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. The Corps required that the city obtain its own spoil site because privately-owned sites, after they are filled with dredged materials, tend to be developed, removing the land as a spoil site.

R. A. Lawson, one of the owners objecting to the acquisition of the property, said the property is in a unique location, is zoned commercial, and is along deep water. He said the owners have received offers in the six-figure range and cited the potential cost to the city of condemnation.

Ed Link, who described himself as an interested citizen motivated by environmental and fiscal interests, also said the acquisition would be a great expense. He said wetlands conservation alone should cause great consideration and said the price of the land could approach $1 million plus the expense of development.

The initial loss involves taking the commercial property off the tax rolls, he said, while the loss of the commercial property will have an effect on the tourist industry. The sand trucks also would pose a traffic hazard, he said.

The sand will be used to fill eroded sections of the beachfront.

As alternates he suggested:
Using an alternate site the same privately-owned site used in for previous dredging.

Using a 50-acre island 100 feet from the Winder property.

Using the Levine property at no cost.

Establishing a hydraulic system and pumping the sand to Fort Story and from there by truck to the sand replenishment areas.

He said the main issue was complicated by adding a boat ramp to the project.

Link maintained that private land can be used — the Corps policy is not strictly adhered to — and the Council can be saved money.

Councilman John A. Baum said that sooner or later the city will have to acquire a permanent site. "If we decide not to do anything that's going to hurt a lot of people, too."

Ervin said that two of the alternates have the same problem — they involve private property. As for a hydraulic system replacing the truck hauling, he said that sand source may change. He added, "We may never put in a boat ramp."

Buchanan moved that the city adopt the ordinance to acquire the 16 acres but solely as a dredge spoil site and that it not be used as a recreational boating site.

Councilman W. H. Kitchin III said he would vote against a boat ramp "now" but did not want to restrict future action of Council.

Ervin said he didn't think an issue should be made on how to use the property. A substitute motion to approve a condemnation ordinance without reference to the boat ramp passed by a vote of 6-4. Voting against

Street Vendors Under Fire Again From Council

—Vendors along the roads of Virginia Beach are so hard to control that City Manager George L. Hanbury would like to see them outlawed altogether.

Councilman John A. Baum asked him to come up with an ordinance which Council could consider.

At the informal meeting of Council Monday evening, Councilwoman Meyers Oberndorf said she has received complaints that the vendors are not being encouraged to move on every 15 minutes. She said that the vendors, of whom about 90 percent are not local, do not charge sales tax.

Hanbury said that trying to regulate this group all over the city is like "trying to regulate talking on Atlantic Avenue. Our recommendation is not to allow them to be there."

He said the vendors park in empty filling station lots and all the rights of way. He said he noticed one was putting up banners like the old Burma Shave signs,

Council Shrugs Meter Responsibility

No, Virginia Beach City Council did not come up with 24-hour meters all by itself.

The Inspectors and the shopowners and the planners from the Southeastern Virginia Planning District Commission all had a share in the decision. Council did, however, approve 24-hour meters in the resort strip and has been receiving brick-bats ever since. People don't cotton to the idea of interrupting whatever they're doing every two hours to feed the meters.

But Monday evening, at an informal session of Council, Councilwoman Meyers Oberndorf said that at an Executive Board meeting of the SVPDC, Council was absolved of the complete guilt of the action. She said that the Commission acknowledged that the action was taken on recommendation of a parking study in which the inspectors, shopowners and planners participated.

She also said that she has noticed that other resort areas have resorted to more stringent parking or no parking at all. She said in Nan-the motion were Councilwomen Barbara Henley, Reba McClanahan and Meyers Oberndorf, and Councilman Clarence A. Holland. Holland said that a boat ramp would be ridiculous on that site. Mayor J. Henry McCoy was absent.

advertising home-made fudge. "I don't know who would buy home-made fudge from a vendor."

He said that the vendors have been allowed to carry on business in the name of free enterprise. He said that the free enterprise aspect breaks down when the vendors become an absolute nuisance and a hazard.

Other than recommending three or four people to patrol the vendors full-time, he said, he sees no solution.

City Restrictions

The city ordinance restricts vendors from remaining on a right of way more than 15 minutes. The city has no control over vendors on private property.

Councilman Clarence A. Holland said he didn't think the vendors were complying with the city ordinance. He commented they were more frequent than 7-11's.

Baum then proposed Hanbury suggest another ordinance.

tucket she noticed signs saying, "Don't Even THINK of Parking Here."

City manager George L. Hanbury said that he had problems with people tearing down signs and then claiming they were not informed.

He said that people are parking illegally all along Shore Drive and the median strips.

✓ Use Pesticides Carefully

The Virginia Beach Department of Agriculture/Extension Service advises home gardeners to use pesticides with caution in the vegetable garden. Many commonly used insecticides are highly toxic to bees. Bees are necessary for pollination and fruit set of many vegetables. If bees are eliminated from the garden, a poor harvest of some crops may occur.

Horsely Elected President

Beach lawyers have learned that Waller H. Horsely, 49, of Richmond, has been chosen today as president-elect of the 16,000-member Virginia State Bar, the administrative arm of the Supreme Court of Virginia responsible for regulating the practice of law in the state and to which all practicing attorneys in Virginia must belong.

The annual election, for a one-year term, took place during the 11:30 a.m. general membership Business Session of the State Bar's 43rd Annual Meeting, June 18-21, at the Cavalier and Holiday Inn Hotels in Virginia Beach. More than 1,200 persons—over 600 Virginia lawyers and judges, plus their spouses, families and guests—are attending the four-day event.

Under Virginia State Bar bylaws, the President-Elect automatically succeeds to the office of President at the close of the Annual Meeting following the one at which he or she is elected President.

Horsely

dent-Elect. Both offices carry a one-year term.

A native of Richmond, Horsely received his bachelor of arts degree with distinction in English from the University of Virginia in 1953 and his law degree from that university's School of Law in

Parks Administrator

Branich Named Employee Of Year By Rotarians

By George Keen,

Special to the Sun

Dick Branich, Parks Administrator of the Beach Department of Parks and Recreation, has been named City Employee of the Year by the Virginia Beach Rotary Club.

Branich was selected for this honor from nominations received from the public by a Selection Committee made up of Chamber of Commerce President Nancy Creech, banker W. Wright Harrison and Edward S. Taylor, Jr.

At a recent Rotary Club dinner Branich received a certificate and a silver bowl from Rotary Club President Bob Mosby. A permanent plaque bearing his name was presented to City Manager George Hanbury to be mounted in the city Administration Building.

Former City Councilman John Griffin, master of ceremonies for the evening, paid tribute to the more than 10,000 city employees that serve the citizens of Virginia Beach. They contribute greatly to the quality of life that has made the city what it is today, Griffin said.

Mayor J. Henry McCoy Jr., thanked Branich on behalf of the City Council for his service to the city since 1963. The consistent quality of the city's parks, golf courses, marinas and beaches are due to the work of Branich and his staff, the Mayor said.

The City Manager praised the Rotary Club for its decision to honor city employees. Others recognize police, fire and school employees, Hanbury said, but this award is long overdue. He also paid tribute to Branich, saying that the Parks Administrator was never satisfied with mediocrity, only the best.

Also thanking Branich for his services was the Director of Parks and Recreation, Harold Whitehurst.

As well as developing a superior park system for the city, Branich has served the community in many ways including as a sports official, with the men's garden club, with his church and with other civic endeavors.

The Virginia Beach Rotary Club plans to present this award every year based on nominations from the public. The club is one of 18,000 Rotary clubs in 120 countries that provide service to their communities, to their countries and to the world.
